Just as life in America was never the same after 9/11, so too after Covid. Our national consciousness and indeed the psychology of the masses has changed so much during this pandemic. The difference between now and say the Spanish flu is that today we have the internet and fewer relationships. This is even changing the entertainment industry, with talk shows doing skype interviews and studio audiences having less members. And now, the movie industry is changing, recognizing that with theaters in many places closed or indeed people too scared anyway to go. Warner Brothers will be releasing all of its movies for 2021 on the HBO Max streaming service for a month, as well as in theaters. This will no doubt affect the box office at theaters in a negative way, however it is not clear whether it will affect the viewership. In fact, the viewership may increase as people have nothing else to do. Will theaters start to go under completely, replaced by streaming services? Only time will tell; stranger things have happened.
